

Call for Artists

Wolf Trail Program (WTP) research project

The Wolf Trail Program (WTP) is a holistic, physical-activity-based wellness program for Indigenous women. In the program participants come together to experience new types of exercise, learn about nutrition and share their personal experiences in a safe, supportive, and culturally appropriate environment. Our research team, consisting of both Indigenous and non-Indigenous individuals, aims to advance the Program and foster its expansion by knowledge sharing and learning.

We are looking for Indigenous artists to help creating a logo for interpreting the project's vision to improve wellness among Indigenous communities with the main focus on women's health.

The selected applicant will work with the project's advisory group and the research team to better understand the project's themes and desired outcomes. The selection panel will be comprised of the core project team, who will review submissions and recommend a shortlist of artists. The chosen applicant will be compensated.

To submit your Expression of Interest (EOI):

- Email adion952@mtroyal.ca by July 15th, 2020
- Attach a short profile and sample of your work
- Please use the following subject line: WTP – EOI/ Call for Artists 2020